

Mainly Minor Flooding Expected Today

OVERVIEW:

- Minor flooding likely, with heaviest rain ending late morning or early afternoon.
- Next storm will bring snow to the interior and more rain toward the coast Sunday.

TIMING

- Widespread rain ends by early this afternoon, but rivers will still rise thereafter, along with some possible ice movement in the far north.

HAZARDS & IMPACTS

- Excessive runoff may result in flooding of small streams, low-lying and flood-prone locations. Localized flash flooding is possible in steep terrain and/or urban areas this morning.
- Travel disruptions are possible due to localized flooded roads in low lying areas, particularly during this morning's commute.
- Gusty northeast winds today.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

- A complex storm system later this weekend could cause additional river rises and renewed flood concerns.
- Minor coastal flooding possible Sunday with pockets of moderate possible.
- Heavy wet snow possible Sunday in the foothills and mountains. Could start as snow most areas Saturday night.
- Please monitor the latest river forecast here.

